

Editorial

Innovations in Language Education: Prospects and Opportunities for Use

Irina Suima

Introduction

Development is the key to success and progress in all areas of life. This principle is especially important in the educational process. Language is one of the key components of cultural and educational development, and its study and teaching require constant improvement and adaptation to changes in society. The main goal of this thematic issue is to provide a comprehensive and in-depth study of key topics and trends in language education and linguistics. The issue will contribute to the introduction of innovative methodologies that can improve language learning motivate students, intercultural understanding, and inform pedagogical approaches around the world. The articles in this issue address different aspects of this issue, offering a wide range of practical solutions for teachers and educators. The issue also aims to support innovations in the field of linguistics by analyzing the structure of languages and functional and semantic features of motion verbs in sports discourse.

Guest editors' biography

Irina Suima, PhD in Philology, Associate Professor at the Department of Translation and Linguistic Training of Foreigners, Oles Honchar Dnipro National University, Dnipro, Ukraine. She is the author of more than 20 scientific papers on linguistic topics. E-mail: suima.ir@ukr.net.